SICK SOLDIERS TAKEN OFF A TRAIN HAD TO BE CARED FOR AT THE CENTRAL FIRE STATION

The present inability of the local health authorities, both county and city, to take care of emergency cases was demonstrated again this morning when two soldier boys, both suffering of measles, had to wait some considerable time before they were in such a position that they might not have any further need for anxiety about their condition and the prospect of speedy help and care.

Inspector George Shorten of the city board of health, hastened to the call of the military medical officer at the depot and had the boys conveyed to the county isolation hospital only to find that the keys which had been handed to him would not open that building, and that, despite the need which arose in a similar case a little over a week ago when a boy suffering in the same way had to be conveyed to Salt Lake because the county hospital here was in no fit shape to receive patients, nothing had since been done either to fit or make ready the place for the reception of such emergency cases.

Inspector Shorten was enabled, a little time later, to make temporary arrangements for the care of the boys at central station of the city fire department where they will receive every possible attention from the men of the department acting under instructions of Chief Graves and Dr. Robinson who hastened to the treatment of the cases.

The Standard, at the time of a similar occurrence, spoke strongly of the inefficient state of our local health equipment. The Standard reporter was present in the union depot and heard the comments of the military medical officer regarding a city that has no more respect for its isolation hospital than to let it exist in neglect and call it a "pest house." The paper goes on record in asking that for the sake of its own good name as well as for the service that every American citizen has a right to demand of his city, this matter receive the urgent, immediate attention of the health authorities of Weber county and the city of Ogden.

Captain McCabe, the military officer who is referred to in this article, spoke quite clearly of his intention to report the whole matter to his division headquarters. When that report reaches the headquarters, it is hoped that the fate of Ogden's request in the Standard that the war office establish a small emergency hospital in this city will also come before the notice of the authorities. Thousands of troops are passing through this city every day and the city of Ogden is likely to be called upon in many instances like that of this morning. In order that Ogden shall not be known among soldiers as the city where a man may likely die for lack of a hospital, let city, county and country get busy on the matter and do something definite right away.

PROVIDING HOMES FOR THE SOLDIERS

The following telegram was received by Dr. E. M. Conroy of the local council of defense and is from the secretary of the interior:

"The committee on public lands of the senate has unanimously reported in favor of a bill appropriating a million dollars to make surveys of farms for returning soldiers. In its report the committee says the proposed legislation is for the purpose of providing an opportunity to procure homes for those of our returning sailors and soldiers who may wish them upon their return from the war, as well as giving a like opportunity to thousands of workers in munitions factories and other war industries who at the conclusion of the war will be out of employment. It is intended to promote as nothing else ever has, the back to the land spirit. It is recognized that one of the great evils of the times in our country is the overcrowding and congestion of people in the cities, many of whom are utterly unfitted for city life and not adapted to the vocations thereof. After the war this undesirable condition will be greatly intensified. Further, there will be hundreds of thousands of young men who will have returned from service in our army and navy who will be out of employment and for whom there will be no jobs or positions. In addition there will be thousands and thousands of men and women, now employed in munitions factories and other war industries which will have close at the end of the war, who will be out of employment. Many of them will have some means which they will have saved at their employment and with which they could locate upon and improve land and engage in agriculture, horticulture, or live stock raising. All of the above described classes of people will be needed on the land. The land will need them and they will need the land. It should be the object of the government and it is the object of this proposed legislation to provide them with the opportunity of getting on the land."

this proposed legislation contemplated, if embarked upon by the government would afford employment to thousands of men who will be out of employment at the termination of the war, when there will be a scarcity of employment in this country and when the idle will be clamoring for employment. "This bill is in line with proposed legislation suggested by the secretary of the interior, and the committee believes it of great importance. The committee further believes that it should be attended to in ample time and that no time should be lost in doing so. The war may end in another year, and if this scheme is to be embarked upon at all no time should be lost in doing so. The committee believes the proposed legislation and the undertaking contemplated thereby to be of great and vital importance to the country and a great and valuable economy program."

HUNS DESTROY HISTORIC THINGS

PARIS, Oct. 26.—Stripping every factory in the city of St. Quentin, the Germans carried off all models and designs and even the accounts of the various companies were removed. The municipal authorities ask that an allied or neutral commission visit the city soon to establish the falsity of the statement made by Dr. Solf, the German foreign minister, that the city was destroyed by shells from the allied guns. Such a visit would also, they say, establish that the German depredations were actuated by a determination to crush the economic life of France.

General Hutier Fighting to Save the Hermann Line

FRENCH HEADQUARTERS, Oct. 26. (Reuter's)—General Debeney's army between the Oise and the Serre is attacking General von Hutier's so-called Hermann position on a front of fifteen miles. The Germans have converted the villages, generally situated on the crests of ridges, into ruins and are resisting bitterly knowing the safety of the German army facing General Gouraud on the east depends on the Hermann line holding.

The Hermann defenses are already penetrated at several points and with the entry today of General Mangin's Fourth army and General Gillaum's Fifth army, into active operations in the region of Chateau Porcien, thus extending the battle front by forty miles. The Hunting line has been fought clean through, the Germans losing 2,000 prisoners. German resistance opposite General Debeney's forces has appreciably weakened.

"Who was the first man, Bobby?" asked the teacher.
"George Washington," answered the young American promptly.
"Why, no, Bobby. You ought to know better than that. It was Adam."
"Oh, well," said Bobby, self-righteously. "I wasn't counting foreigners."—Ladies' Home Journal.
